Learning outcomes

PLU 1. Identifies and analyzes the business operations of an organization (unit) in broad terms using a prescribed format and derives issues and developments that influence the efficiency and/or effectiveness of business operations.

PLU 2. Contributes to the development of a learning culture within a learning team, where those involved learn to use their own strengths, talents, goals and personal (professional) responsibility to work on education.

PLU 5. Facilitates a good and inviting learning environment for themselves and within the training context to develop personally and as a team so that they work collectively on education.

PLU 7. Demonstrate an investigative and critical attitude in education and professional practice, where observations and considerations can be explained and possible actions are taken based on what has been learned.

Content

In this module we focus on the (un)sustainability of the current healthcare system. The common thread, the core of the theme, are the challenges in care and well-being. During a teaching week, the themes are worked on through various teaching methods and various assignments. You will be introduced to the form and content of the HBO programme, to the people who work there and, of course, to each other, your fellow students who have also opted for the MiZ programme. Learning together forms the basis of the study program and a good relationship with your fellow students and the people of the study program is very important. You immediately notice from the way in which education is structured that you have to do it together, while you are assessed as an individual.
