Profile of the programme

The graduate is able to perform all administrative tasks for companies which are not subject to statutory audits, can advise entrepreneurs and help them expand their companies and can make preparations for when the company is subject to statutory audits. The graduate is also able to operationally perform a statutory audit in keeping with current laws and regulations. Graduates know the limits of their own knowledge and abilities and are aware of when to refer clients to specialists. They can also identify when their clients' companies are large enough to become subject to statutory audits and thus when their clients would be better off with an accountant who can offer full certifying authority.

Learning outcomes

The graduate is able to demonstrate that s/he:

- can set up (automated) accounts and provide advice on them as an external service provider in a dynamic environment. S/he can do this independently in the case of less complex organisations and under supervision in the case of complex organisations;
