Inhoud

This module equips the student with the basic concepts and knowledge needed to segment the market, carry out target group research for a brand, and translate research outcomes into clearly defined brand positioning. Special attention is devoted to the online media landscape and the components and importance of content strategy. Because most companies operate in an international environment, students also receive an introduction to concepts on intercultural communication theory and explore the impact of culture on brand positioning. Students are trained in the use of professional analytical tools and monitoring software for online media.
